Profile of successful applicants

- We seek students whose academic record places them in approximately the top 3% of the ability range
- Most – though by no means all – successful applicants have an AS UMS average (across their best (arts) or most relevant (sciences) three subjects) of comfortably above 90%
- The mean AS average of students receiving offers from a range of Cambridge Colleges in 2010/11 was 94-96%
- Note that these figures are averages, which means that there were successful Cambridge applicants who had UMS averages in their best/most relevant three subjects below 90%
- Every applicant is looked at as an individual

UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE

Swansea uni how to apply for extenuating circumstances. Cambridge university extenuating circumstances form. How to write a waiver letter for university. How to write an extenuating circumstances letter for university.

The University of Cambridge wishes to admit the best students whatever their background. The Extenuating Circumstances Form is a University-wide initiative designed to ensure that all Colleges have the information they require in order to accurately assess applicants who have experienced particular personal or educational disadvantage. The Extenuating Circumstances Form has been designed to ensure that the Cambridge Colleges have the information they require in order accurately to assess any applicant who has experienced particular personal or educational disadvantage. This form should only be used where an applicant's education has been significantly disrupted or disadvantaged through health or personal problems, disability or difficulties with schooling. The information provided on the form will help Admissions Tutors by giving a context against which they can judge the academic record of applicants, and provide information that's useful when assessing applicants' performance at interview (if interviewed). The sort of circumstances it would be appropriate to inform us of via this form include: a serious, acute or chronic medical condition (especially since the age of 14) which caused significant educational disruption significant caring responsibilities, or recent bereavement or serious illness within close family serious disruption to educational provision at school/college other circumstances where serious disruption has occurred – the school/college is welcome to contact a College admissions office to discuss an applicant's particular circumstances The Extenuating Circumstances Form should normally be submitted by the applicant's school/college by the 22 October application deadline. In those rare cases where the applicant's school/college is unaware of the circumstances a doctor or social worker may complete and validate the form on the applicant's behalf. The Extenuating Circumstances Form is designed to help those applicants whose education, or personal and social background has been disadvantaged in some way. We recognise that in some cases, applicants may have achieved lower grades at GCSE than expected but may have the academic ability and commitment to thrive at Cambridge University on their chosen course. It may be worth arranging for an Extenuating Circumstances Form to be completed if your education has been significantly disrupted or disadvantaged through health or personal problems, disability or difficulties with schooling. For example you could inform us of: a serious medical condition, especially since the age of 14 significant caring responsibilities, recent bereavement or serious illness within close family other circumstances where education has been seriously disrupted – schools should feel free to contact us on apply@robinson.cam.ac.uk to discuss an applicants particular situation. Extenuating Circumstances Forms are normally completed by a teacher at the applicant’s school or college by the deadline of 22 October. Occasionally, when the school may be unaware of the circumstances it may be more appropriate for a doctor or social worker to complete and validate the form. Updated May 2022 The ECF is now closed for 2022 entry. If there is additional supporting information you need to make your College aware of, please contact them directly. The form will open for 2023 entry in September 2022. The Extenuating Circumstances Form (ECF) is designed to ensure that all Colleges of the University of Cambridge have the information they require to accurately assess applicants who have experienced particular personal or educational disadvantage*. It helps Admissions Tutors by providing, first, context against which they can judge the academic record of an applicant, and, secondly, information useful in assessing an applicant’s performance at interview. For 2023 entry, the form must arrive by 22 October 2022 if the information is to be considered when Colleges are deciding which applicants to call for interview. Forms received thereafter will be considered as part of post-interview decision-making and should be sent at the earliest opportunity. The ECF should normally be completed and submitted by the applicant's school/college. Please note, in those cases where the applicant's school/college remains unaware of the full circumstances, the applicant’s doctor or social worker may complete the form on the applicant's behalf. When completing the ECF on behalf of an applicant, you will need to select the College to which the applicant has applied. Where the applicant has applied to an unspecified College, select 'Open Application' and if you don't know which College the applicant has applied to, select 'Unknown'. -- * Do not use this form for COVID-19-related educational disruption, which should be declared by the applicant on the Additional Applicant Information Form (AAIF) that will be provided to them. If your education or home life has been seriously disrupted or disadvantaged through health, disability, difficulties with schooling (other than Covid-19), or challenging personal or family circumstances, please ask a teacher (or if preferable a doctor or social worker) to send us an Online Extenuating Circumstances Form. This is an additional reference to ensure that we are able to take your circumstances into account when assessing your application. Please do not use this form for COVID-19-related educational disruption, as we'll ask all applicants about this on a separate form. The Extenuating Circumstances Form for Christ's College will be available here in late Sept / early Oct (this text will be a link). Second Court Who can send the form a school teacher or tutor a doctor a social worker It is not possible to complete the form yourself. How to send the form It's an online form so the relevant person just needs to click on the link in the box above (once available), fill it in and press submit at the end. They will see a screen confirming that the form has been received safely. The deadline is 22 October The Christ's deadline for the Online Extenuating Circumstances Form is 22 October (23:59). Meeting this deadline ensures that the form is part of your application from the beginning. We will accept Extenuating Circumstances Forms received after 22 October, but plase be aware that we can only consider information that is part of your application at the time it is read. Forms sent later in the appplication process may be too late for the stage when we are selecting students for interview, but in that case they would be considered as part of any post-interview decision-making. If your circumstances relate to a disability, Specific Learning Difficulty or long-term illness Please also read the page for applicants with a disability, Specific Learning Difficulty or long term illness. In some cases it is appropriate to send both forms. Back to UK application support / Next: Disability, Specific Learning Difficulty or long term illness How much do Cambridge take extenuating circumstances into account? What extenuating circumstances, exactly? Cambridge doesn't have retakes or anything, but they have a system of allowances. These are obtained through your Tutor/Senior Tutor via the Applications Committee - a 'department' within the university. More information is here: For applying to Cambridge for an undergraduate course? She means when applying. If your Nan dies when you're doing your AS levels or your failing school's on a sink estate. Contextual offer stuff. (Original post by cambio wechsel) She means when applying. If your Nan dies when you're doing your AS levels or your failing school's on a sink estate. Contextual offer stuff. Thanks for that rosieblue Personal troubles such as these could be mentioned in a reference, and Cambridge always admits students after all aspects of the application have been considered. Your school should be able to say whether you can apply using one of the outreach schemes rosieblue is this for engineering specifically or Cambridge in general? I think I want to apply for engineering so yes (Original post by rosieblue) How much do Cambridge take extenuating circumstances into account? They take extenuating circumstances seriously. So, when you apply to Cambridge you complete your UCAS as normal, but you also complete a couple of other forms. Firstly, everyone completes the SAQ (Supplementary Application Questionnaire), This is like a very detailed UCAS form. And then, if needed, their separate ECF (Extenuating Circumstances Form) informs Cambridge about any significant circumstances that may have affected you or your education. In addition, contextual aspects, such as being at an "underperforming" school, etc, are also taken into account. But that's slightly different to ECs. All applications are then assessed and reviewed holistically, taking ECs and contextual information into account as necessary. Are you in Y12? What A-levels, or equivalents, are you doing? Posted from TSR Mobile I'm doing German, Maths and Physics and hoping to do an AS in Further Maths next year. (Original post by rosieblue) I'm doing German, Maths and Physics and hoping to do an AS in Further Maths next year. It might be worth checking with Cambridge about "only" having AS FM. I suggest you ask about it (and their approach to ECs) in the thread currently being hosted by Peterhouse Admissions. They are very helpful and the advice applies across Cambridge not just Peterhouse (unless they state otherwise). (Original post by Doonesbury) They take extenuating circumstances seriously. Posted from TSR Mobile Hi. I'm in Y13 and thinking of applying to Cambridge However, due to illness, surgery and two family deaths last year, my AS maths and further maths grades are significantly lower than I was working at before this. I'm looking to complete the ECF but I'm worried that my low UMS will mean I won't even be considered. Is it still worth applying? I am retaking my maths exams btw to boost my grades. I am predicted A* A B (in maths) and I'm looking to take my B upto an A through class work. Thanks (Original post by aj2210) Hi. However having predictions below the typical requirements may still cause a problem. You can certainly apply now, and if necessary reapply next year with grades achieved. Posted from TSR Mobile
