just a few cases, and those relatively little important, the borders of the nation of the future resemble those of the past. Spain and Portugal may emerge unchanged from the Paris Conference, as they have done for this subject of the Congress of Vienna for a century. Norway can remain the same, and so it may remain the same, and perhaps Sweden and Switzerland. But where is another European State which will issue from the unchanged imminent adjustment? The borders of the British Empire, France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Italy and Russia, Serbia and Greece and Roumania and Bulgaria, Albania and the Turkish Empire, all of these must be elaborated again by the consulting rapporteurs at the Congress gathered on the banks of the Seine River. For the partition lines of the past joined yesterday's snows. The borders of Belgium and the Netherlands and Luxembourg and Denmark will probably be rectifying. And we must become familiar, not only with a new Europe, but also with a new Africa and a new Asia and a new Pacific Ocean
For the Paris consultancy cartographers, you will also be required to present fresh projects and a new coloration for large sections of the land and the sea beyond the borders of European lands and waters. A conference called to give peace to the world must begin by taking care of the fences of the world. One thing, then, is undoubted. The map of Europe where we were created has forever passed into the limbo of discarded things. It will therefore have only a fleeting expression of that continuous and mocking process, called history - is really just an agreed fable. Let us not think for a moment that we are going through experience, something so far unknown. for the parents of our parents passed through the same, and, stunned and disconcerted by the overwhelming and cataclysmic occurrences of their day, as we by those of ours, they felt the same hot breath of vertendo and conflicting passions, they looked at an equally uncertain and prohibiting future. Economists used to talk about the periodicity of panics as if it were a law of nature. historians can with equal confidence speak of cycles of seizure securring with almost rhythmic regularity. the centuries xvi, xvii and xix had all their general seizures, which swept ancient landmarks in reckless rush and their general seizures.
 inaugurated new courses with careless rapture of imagination and with lordial indifference to the power of habit, to the authority of oo. the path of modern history is full of broken utopias, since the objects of faith and hope for multitudes of men. the last general convulsion was that which grew from the French Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars, and the most instructive is its history for us, caught in the furious whirlwind of a similar commotion. europe, a century ago, knew the same efforts, hovering over the same edge of failure and disaster. the strain lasted much longer and was even more generally diffuse. There were no neutrals in the time of Napoleon, saving the turkey. the spain and portugal, the holanda and the dinamarca, the sweden and the shores that were remote—asiatic, African, American. Napoleon fought with a famous campaign in the egito, and his adventures in Syria can be discussed while those of the general allenby. our war of 1812 and the wars of South American independence were incidentshistory. All that remained was Pitt, who was alone. He was in Bath, trying to recover his sadly broken health when he heard the furious gallop of a horse. âf "It must be a mail, he exclaimed: 'With news to me.' Opening the package, he said: 'His news, indeed. "It was the news of Austerlitz. He then asked her a map and wished to be left alone. From that day on, he failed quickly. On January 9, 1806, he left for his house in Putney. He arrived in his village on the 12th. When he entered, his eyes fell on the map of Europe. "Roll up on that map, he said: 'It will not be desired those ten years. Soul didn't leave England. He entered the most intimate sanctuary of English patriotism. It became a beacon and an oriflamme for a nation that takes its defeats in silence and without complaint, a nation that from the broken ruins of its failures creates triumphal arches under which the soldiers ended up passing. It was what he did at the time of Louis XIV and at the time of Napoleon; And what it was to do in a time not less important of our prediction. The map of Europe was not necessary again for almost ten years and, during the intermediary period, I was not sure that it would be necessary. During that surprising decade Napoleon, irradiated with the dazzling beams that came out of the sun of Austerlitz, touched the flag-coffee horn in a truly imperial manner and, as it had never been played before: redesign the limits of Gibraltar to the Niemen River, from Norway to Sicily; creating new states for brothers and sisters; Removing Europe to Your HeartsParing Austria Down in successive operations; Destroaning royal houses; Cutting the prontessia into pieces; abolishing the sacred imposing Romano-Germ river. ending the Pope's temporal power; making Rome his own second capital, and giving his name to his son as a title the moment he was born; forming the Ita in new and strange and fleeting forms like fantasy has reached it.  accident, as it is well known, and the map of Europe was launched once again in the Vienna Congress. In the wool light of these days, he was carefully examined by the power, and did not find so evil. Some changes were made, but were slightly compared to those that had recently been subjected. It is not necessary to entertain the sofavian opinion, at this moment so widespread, that the Congress of Vienna was completely given to sin and lazy. He made many mistakes, some of which were serious; The Spam was not completely beautiful, and it did not catch and incorporate into the world life the dream of peace on earth, goodwill for all. But he performed a fair day of work, and although not prevented subsequent local wars, it should be noted that Europe was visited by no general war during an entire summer. The territorial problems that confront us today are a much broader scan than one hundred years old. They arise to a large extent that a war began for the extinction of a small state, the resulted in that extinction, but in the destruction of the Trown. Great impositions, frog, the ustria-hungary, and Turkey, and in the defeat of a fourth, Germany, and the overthrow of Tis Monarchas. Meanwhile, the Sabvia emerges from the colossal destroy aus aus me acnun euq od setrof integrity and aimed at a large increase in its territory. It is doubtful that the history of the world contains a more ironic page, globe; Austria-Hungary 261.000; Germany 208,000; Turkey 710,000 or three and a half times more than three times the continental area of the United States, excluding Alaska and with a population of two hundred and fifty million. The Congress of Vienna had a small area and a population of thirty-two million to distribute as the prize of war, namely the duchy of Warsaw, which was only a small part of the former Poland, parts of Germany on the left bank of the Rhine. and the Italian peninsula. Throughout this area of over 9,000,000 square miles, supporting a population of a quarter of a billion, no man, no group of men can point the limits. Fortunately, history is not a problem in mathematics. If it were, the perspective would be even darker than it is. It took the Congress of Vienna nine months to resolve an agreement of its territorial problems, which were few and simple compared to ours, how long will the Paris conference take? Those who wish to be optimistic about the Paris conference do Well, to forget the teachings of history, often so unpleasant and worrying. They find a greater consolation in an act of faith, in the affirmation that everything is different now. And there is certainly at least one difference, although this makes the greatest harmony and the greatest expedition of the speakers which after all are the Great Five Powers, Vienna also had its five "still is to be seen. The characteristic work of the Paris conference will be construction, creation: theof a new map, not unfolding from the old slightly changed; The recognition of new nations, such as the Tzecho-Slovakia and the Slavia Jugo, or ancient nations restored to life, such as Poland. The remnant is easy if someone has only the power and will; Creation is an enterprise in the unknown and uncertain, and is highly conducive to the divergences of thought, the division in the ranks; As a restoration army knows exactly what it wants to do, namely, re-mount the ancient landmarks - and that too, as soon as possible - to bring back the good old times, to renew the broken connection with the past. Whether we like it or not, ours is the hardest task. If the five great powers of 1919 were eager to restore the map of 1914, they could not do so; While the five great powers of 1814 found it easy to reverse Napoleon Bonaparte's cartoon innovations. The work of Lenin and Trotzky will not be so easily broken. Fortunately for the peace of his spirit, Napoleon does not know that. influence and increasing the territory of Russia, as everyone saw in 1815. Lenin and Trotzky, the Russians, not only zealously coonuted to destroy the prestige of their country: they consented and contributed, with the best of their ability, to the colossal dismemberment of Russia and its total impotence. Russia became merely a geographical expression, the combined conquest of German militarism and Russian socialism. There's no Russia is a disorganized aggregation of local governments, presenting, among other things, a wild tangle of territorial problems - and territorial problems similar to primitives with most landmarks entirely obliterated. The one outstanding landmark in contemporary Russia is that set up on March 3, 1918¢ÃÂÂthe treaty of Brest-Litovsk. That treaty has never been recognized by any of the victorious Allies; nevertheless, it dogs them night and day in the time of triumph, embittering peace, if not preventing it, darkening counsel, and putting a strain upon friendship. The of Brest-Litovsk may be repudiated by the conferees of Paris; it may be dead as far as Germany, its chief author, is concerned; but it is far from being a negligible factor in the history of the present. On the contrary, it, and the things it represents and embodies in its fell phrases, are bound to exercise a profound and disturbing influence upon the future. By that treaty Russia renounced an enormous territory, more than twice the size of the Germany may not get what she expected and intended to get from having imposed these monstrous terms upon a defeated and demoralized foe, but she will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that the might of her blows, aided by the ductility of Russian ¢ÃÂÂreformers,¢Ã who, having renounced patriotism as a bourgeois and capitalistic quality, found it not difficult to renounced patriotism as a bourgeois and capitalistic quality, found it not difficult to renounced patriotism as a bourgeois and capitalistic quality, found it not difficult to renounce an imperial territory, have profoundly transformed Russia as a factor in international affairs. Of course, out of this vast domain, a domain stretching from the Baltic to the Black Sea, Germany intended to create a number of small states which might receive German political, military, and economic system. She will be forced to let go the political and military control for the time being; but unless the Conference of Paris can invent safeguards more promising than any yet suggested against economic saM .zap ed somret somix³Årp so e atorred ad arof odnecserc seµÃ§Åapucoerp saus ¡Ãret m©Ãbmat alE .agitna arienam amsem ad sohnize£Ãp ed seµÃ§Ãarolpxe saus ravoner etnemataidemi ©Ã ever. If Germany of the future is a socialist or bourgeois republic, or a restored monarchy, it will make no difference with this situation. We have a great fact here, outlined, looking at us from the next map of Europe, whose implications we will do well not ignore or minimize. There is another phase of the problem of the future of Germany, of which there has not yet been serious discussion, but that the world will be forced to face. German Austria, and it is said that many German Austria, and it is said th that, however unpleasant it is, we must swallow this particular pill. Not unless we are eager to multiply and emphasize the difficulties of the future! If the world allows such a consummation, it will be guilty of madness far beyond the flight of German imagination. It is not necessary to apply any principle anywhere, the inevitable tendency of which application will endanger the peace of the world. To reward Germany for what it has done in the last four years, allowing it to issue war with a larger territory and a larger population than ever, would be the bankruptcy of common sense and decency. Germany could well give up the luxury of renouncing Alsace-Lorena, the Northern Schleswig, and its Polish possessions, could win Upper and Lower Austria, Tyrol, Salzburg, Styria and other Austrian provinces. And Vienna would be an excellent exchange for Strasburg and Posen. German militarism could proudly point to such remarkable success, so important a rise to strength od seµÄinipo and well-being of the rest of the world? The principle was designed to promote the common enemy of mankind. The Paris Conference will be firmly planted on the basis of the guarantees of Germany, not concessions and benefits to it. It will not assume that the German mind has changed. He will receive the conservative notion that miracles do not happen in the modern world and that Germany will not disappear quickly. You will also be mindful of the fact that historically, revolutions have generally been successful by counter-revolutions. Moreover, it will not be impossible for a nation, nourished by its own devised blatant for fifty years, blocked in its purposes after four years of various victories, at the right time, will seek to pay that score, to avenge this numiliation and win once for all the things it almost won before. There is little to show that Germany has passed or is undergoing any radical transformation, which it possesses or probably has a new psychology. New psychology is not easily obtained either by individuals or by nations. One of them has the freedom of prognosis of a radical change of politics as a result of a revolt in a state, only when the ruler and his people have long gone away in thought and feeling, in purpose and in aspiration. This was the case in 18th-century France. The intellectual leaders, the masses of the peasantry, and particularly the bourgeoisie, all came to look at the state in opposition to their interests and needs, as a bar for nationals Before the revolution itself occurred, there was a profound revolution in the minds of most of the population. And so, when the revolution is the laws and the life of the friar, for the simple reason that they had already been changed in the hearts and minds of most French. where is something in the mountain parallel to this internal transformation? the history of Germany during the last forty years, during the last ten years, showed the opposite phenomenon: a growing harmony and not a decreasing between the governors and the governed. If someone wants to test this statement, compare it to the only party of opposition in the war of 1870 and the war of our days. in the first, the socialists, who were few in number, objected to militarism, to magnify them, to the declaration of war and the annexation of the Alsace-Lorena, and their leaders, bebel and liebknecht, paid for their opposition for bein thrown into prison. today's socialists, much more numerous and with much greater powers of opposition, committed themselves to militarism, warmly approved the annexations voting in the treaty of Brest-Litovsk and have on all occasions, in the year of our Lord 1918, joined the general cry that Alsace-Lorraine should never be delivered. seems to be the business of an opposition to oppose. It must be from the assembly of weimar a German psychology caused war and continued, the ruling classes would never have risked war if they did not know the temperament and nature of the German psychology. German psychology caused war and continued the ruling classes would never have risked war if they did not know the temperament and nature of the German psychology.

occurred to show that the great masses of the people differed in 1914 from their rulers, whether in their conceptions of nature and of the state, in its moral indifference, or in its arrogance and conception. The defeat that Germany suffered may somewhat diminish its contempt of other nations. It's not likely she's gonna diminish their hatred. It is much more likely to intensify this hatred. Men do not love their enemies any more because their enemies forced them to bite the dust. What we know about the Germans does not lead to believing, or that they are prone to changing and giving the world the spectacle of the miracle of a new psychology. Most of the members of the Empire. Moreover, we can also remember that the Prussians will still control Germany, for the excellent reason that three fifths of the Germans are Prussians, and the Prussians know how stricter, in mind and in a way, than most men. The world still awaits the dawn of an essentially new Germany. And when you see it, you'll wait even longer, as often the whole day does not bear the promise of dawn. Such, then, are the great exceptional characteristics of the situation. The great Slavic Empire of Russia was overthrown, and a vast field for German economic exploitation and for insidious or open political influence was opened in the East. A restored Poland, under the best conditions, will be for a long time only an uncertain and inadequate barrier. German proposes the annexation of German Austria and German Bohemia. If it succeeds in this, then the new and small Czech-Slovak Republic will be surrounded in the north, west and south by the powerful state of Germany. It will be a mere salient project in German lands, a salient carried out by a weak people before the intense and secular hatred of an overwhelmingly stronger .asioc amsem a omoc otsiv ©Ã siam ,adum £Ãmela a§Ãaema a siam of. Asanitxe ad aroh a ragehc odnaug E Surprising from the present embarrassments of Germany, there is a serious disservice to a world that has just by clearly and effectively neutralizing the dangers that include it. The time for optimism has not yet occurred, nor seems likely to soon attack. All other issues involved in the adjustment of the world's limits are distinctly secondary, compared to this central fact of Germany's liberation from pressure on its borders of powerful states, except for the West; And there the comparison is between France, with a population of less than forty million, and Germany with an almost two times higher. The future of the German colonies, the highlighted parts of the Turkish Empire, the various Balkan states, will be important for the people in question, but it will not be decisive for the course of general history. The great influences and decisive impulses shape and determine, in large part, the fates of these countries and peoples will emanate from Europe, as so far, and will be the product of European conditions. Asia and Africa will continue to be annexed to Europe, any disguise given to them, due to the direct political connections that will exist between major areas of these continents and Britain, France and Italy. and useless for any individual to try to indicate in detail the many boundary lines that must be drawn on the world map as a result of the dissolution of Russia, Austria-Hungary and Turkey. It would be inappropriate to usurp the high prerogatives of the Paris Conference. In addition, as Lamartine once said, in a moment of perplexity, 'Faut Laisser Quelque chose a la Providence' and it is desirable, since they must constitute the norm of crust and the reason for the action in the international poetry of the future. Any sound idealism should be based on diffilial and unpleasant realism, realism.
